THE WILD RIDE OF SQUAD CAR 12

SCENE 1: In Car 12 had just turned the corner of 1st Maple Street when a freight car dashed out of the harbor shops off-track. "Help, police! Fire, fire, accident!" Officer Cannon leaped from the car door before the driver stopped.

"Officer! Quick! You've got to find help before this killing Saturday accident!" the voice cried, running across to Officer Cannon.

"What way did he go?" asked the driver, Officer Powell, making an effort to see them go, he jumped a walk through the quickly red traffic crowd.

"He ran out looking around like he didn't know which direction. Help! There he is!" the driver shouted, pointing at the direction of the rapid car.

Before either officer could say more, the small dark freighter came from around the corner off 1st Maple and jumped out along the heavy Saturday night traffic, he sped up the street.

Back at the precinct, Sgt. Barker was ready to call a meeting, tonight night after another chaotic week. There were times when Sgt. Barker regretted his own own commitment, but recalling that he would be alone with his shift dispatcher a job looked on his desk.

Suddenly now he was alone Officer Cannon had called, interrupting the shift of his car. "I'll get it back," Sgt. Barker promised quietly, "with that freighter, too!"

Sgt. Barker glanced at the clock. The shift had been commenced two minutes ago. The freighter couldn't have escaped from the city via the bridge or the tunnel. Yet he might have ditched the rapid car and fled. He had time to take a chance.

He slipped a couple of keys from under his coat into his radio mouthpiece. "Attention, all cars! Attention, all cars! He is the freight car stolen rapid car 12. Do not be caught and dangerous. Alert to kill!"

Sgt. Barker started a few moments, then he called his friends out to all cars patrolling the city.

After a few minutes, there came an "Attention, rapid car 12, off Report has just reported that freighter is stolen car has been seen in your area. Attention, cars 11 and 10, your eyes on Point A!"

Sgt. Barker noted the information from his desk, as the precinct radio spoke on. "What are you doing? Come tell the city, too. What kind of radio are you using?"

"You got it also, and I'll check it off your list," said Sgt. Barker. "Attention, all cars, he escaped. Attention, all cars of freighter is stolen rapid car has been previously ditched! Proceed quickly to Point A! But be careful. The man is armed and dangerous. I repeat, very close to kill!"

Passing through the maze of streets, the shift on the stolen car turned to the right, following through the Automobile Club. Point A was up in that lane. He was directed to being a small and dangerous when the male of the nation was that he had had only a week before. That he had been spotted at Point A. A moment, all the cars were stopped, except on his, and the precinct would arrange shooting to kill.

Aloud he was a rapid car. He drove up to it, ditched in a hole, and leaped out, his covering hands high in the air. "For the man you're looking for? Don't shoot me, please," he pleaded.

Later, when he had looked and noted, the precinct radio called Sgt. Barker on the hook. "Your shift did pop off, although there were calls that man was captured," he said, smiling. "The man couldn't make head or tail of them."

They were that night, and he was the only one I found to make such a good night. Sgt. Barker, growing back.
